

MAINE TO GREENLAND

EXPLORING THE MARITIME FAR NORTHEAST

by Wilfred E. Richard and William W. Fitzhugh

Maine to Greenland is a testament to one of the world's great - and little acknowledged - geographic regions: the Maritime Far Northeast. Will Richard's essays and photography documenting his personal odyssey of more than two decades provide a dramatic explication of the power of the far northeast concept. We learn about the history, environments, and cultures of the region, and the idea of how small-scale societies have adapted to rather than change their environments. The archaeological work of Fitzhugh on the Lower North Shore of Quebec is uncovering the multilayered settlements of the Inuit and Basque. The book has a strong "green" message at the same time that it promotes understanding about a part of the world--the northwest Atlantic coastal region that once was well-known to Europeans and Americans, but which sank into obscurity at the close of the great schooner fisheries and WWII. Now, the region is re-emerging as a result of climate change, the political emergence of Native people, and the opening of the Arctic Ocean.

WILFRED RICHARD holds a PhD in geography from the University of Waterloo, Faculty of Environmental Studies of Ontario, Canada, and an MA in anthropology from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is a Research Collaborator with the Smithsonian's Arctic Studies Center and a Research Fellow with Greenland's Ummannaq Polar Institute. Richard is a Registered Maine Guide.

WILLIAM FITZHUGH is the Director of the Arctic Studies Center and curator in the Department of Anthropology at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History. He has conducted archaeological and environmental research from New England to Baffin Island and is currently researching Basque and Inuit archaeology in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.
